

From the Corner Office

One of the more popular topics we've talked about in these Corner Office stories is PS&S's expansion beyond our home office in Warren, NJ. This month, we're heading south to focus on our team in Wall.

Two years after opening the office, great things are happening at our new Route 34 location. This month, our employee spotlight is on Associate Principal Dave Applegate who, in just these two short years, has had a major impact on our Utility Services Group.

We'll also take a look at a project near and dear to Dave: rebuilding the pump stations down the shore close to where he grew up and currently lives. Getting the region "back to normal" after Superstorm Sandy has been a priority for PS&S since the days immediately following the storm in 2012. Having a team in Wall who live and work in some of the hardest hit areas helps us succeed.

One of the valued employees that joined our Wall office in 2013 is Natalya Shimunova, an engineer who was born in the Soviet Union and came to the U.S. at the age of 20. Natalya has embraced PS&S's culture of giving back to the community and is an active member of Engineers Without Borders. You can read more about Natalya's unique story in this recently published Asbury Park Press profile.

The technical capabilities brought in by the team of professionals who have joined PS&S have allowed us to continue to pursue and win work and has afforded us ongoing growth. With this growth comes new career opportunities at all levels, not only in Wall, but throughout PS&S.
