From the Corner Office

One of the more popular topics we've talked about in these Corner Office stories is PS&S's expansion beyond our home office in Warren, NJ. This month, we're heading south to focus on our team in Wall.

Two years after opening the office, great things are happening at our new Route 34 location. This month, our employee spotlight is on Associate Principal Dave Applegate who, in just these two short years, has had a major impact on our Utility Services Group.

Case in Point: Route 35 Stormwater Improvements

On December 31, 2012, Dave Applegate drove to the Mantoloking and Bay Head areas of the Jersey Shore and was completely humbled beyond description. Having grown up in Lavallette, one of the shore communities affected by Superstorm Sandy, he knew the area well and thought he was prepared to see the damage and deal with the limited access.

Disorientation came quickly, as he did not recognize portions of the barrier island's Route 35 corridor, particularly in the Mantoloking section. The photo accompanying this story was the view from a bulkhead for one of the pump stations: a beautiful house had become a houseboat.

Employee Spotlight: Dave Applegate

He was born in Freehold and raised in Lavallette...now decades after growing up on the Jersey Shore, Dave Applegate is helping to restore the area after the devastating impact of Superstorm Sandy. Who says you can't go home?

Dave joined PS&S in 2013 as a Senior Director in the Wall Office. He came to the company along with six colleagues during a transitional period in the Monmouth/Ocean County engineering consulting world. The team hit the ground running, bringing access to a new region for PS&S to build a new client base including the largest water utility company in the United States, New Jersey American Water.
